A corner on lemons is reported in Bisbee. Perfectly natural after the large quantity disposed of at the recent charter election in that city.

Editor Kane of the Graham County Advocate has taken unto himself a bride. Here's hoping that his acquisition will help Brother Kane to look on the brighter side of life.

Every business and professional man in Globe should attend the meeting called for tomorrow night to organize a chamber of commerce. The consummation of this object will mean much to Globe and this mining district.

It is announced in the press dispatches that Mrs. Roosevelt has banished stays from her wardrobe. Not even the most radical dress reformer has ever held that stays did any particular harm to a wardrobe.

Some territorial papers are trying to whitewash the American officers who took part in the outrageous kidnapping affair at Douglas. It makes little difference that the man has been returned to this country. Let the law take its course with those who have disgraced their official positions and the fair name of Arizona, including the Mexican consul at Douglas, who engineered the affair.

The Randolph lines which recently acquired the Phoenix & Eastern road, an event which at the time was hailed with much joy in the territorial press, is reported to have raised freight rates almost twice over what they were. The mining industry, which gives life to this road, is imperiled by such an outrageous move. It looks to us as though there were some short-sighted men connected with the affairs of the Randolph lines who ought to be cutting alfalfa back on the farm instead of trying to run railroads.

THE BALDWIN HANGING

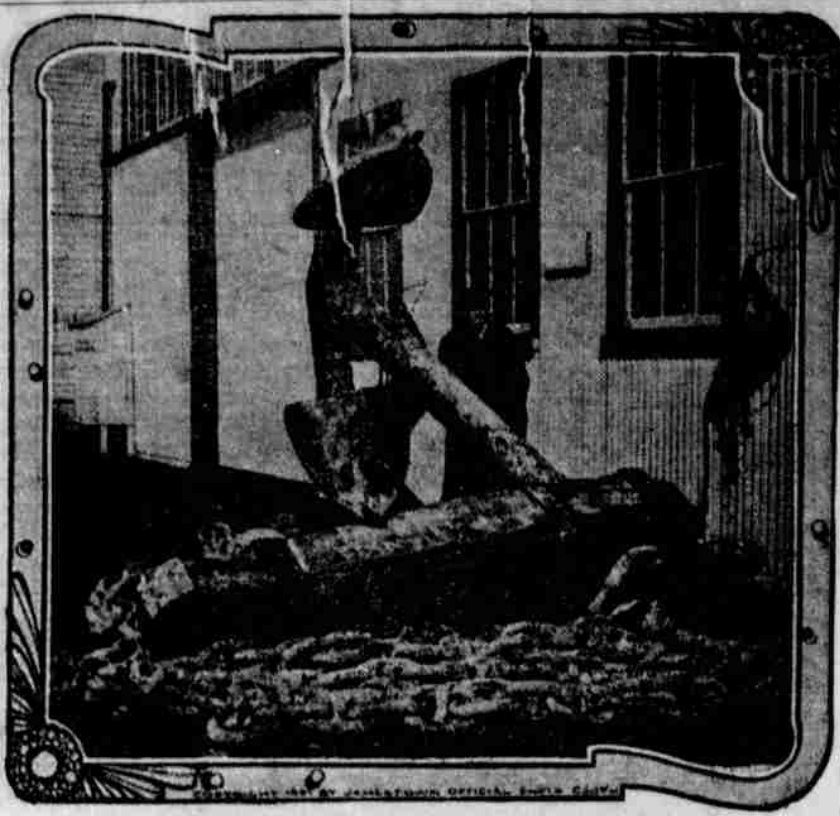

The Phoenix Republican, referring editorially to the recent hanging of William Baldwin at Solomonville, says under the caption of "A Creditable Proceeding":

The negro Baldwin episode culminating in the hanging of Baldwin may be said to have reflected credit upon the people of Gila and Graham counties if credit can possibly come from such an event. It proved at the same time the respect of the people for law and order in the face of the strongest possible temptation to break it. It proved also the promptness of the courts and their absolute fairness.

There was every element in the crime of Baldwin to excite the community to a lawless pitch, the color of the murderer and the circumstances of the murder. In nine exactly similar cases out of ten, anywhere else in the United States, irresistible mobs would have brushed law aside and have added a lasting disgrace to the neighborhood already stained by a terrible crime. But at Globe after the intoxication of horror had passed away there was an almost unanimous desire that the law should be recognized.

There was, too, the barest possibility that Baldwin was innocent and that he might escape death. Every opportunity that belonged to him was allowed him. There is no record anywhere of a more dispassionate murder trial than that conducted at Solomonville, whether the case was taken on a change of venue. There was not a right of which the defendant was deprived. He was afforded able counsel who, while they did not seek to win legal victory by means of technicalities, insisted, and saw to it, that if their client was guilty twelve honest men should be convinced of his guilt.

The fairness to this friendless negro did not stop there. There was the possibility that the supreme court in reviewing the case might find that the defendant had been denied some right. Though there was no further contest, the higher court of its own motion continued the case in order that the defendant might be given further time to show that he had not been properly tried. It was only when the court believed that the matter had been brought to an end that the mandate was set down and further proceeding toward the execution of Baldwin was ordered. The last legal doubt of his guilt was removed. There had really been no moral doubt of it.

THE ANCHOR OF THE MERRIMAC.

Things historical are in vogue these days, especially in the region round about Norfolk, Va., where the Jamestown tercentennial is being celebrated. One of the most interesting relics recently "dug up" is a reminder of that furious and famous battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac in Hampton Roads during the civil war. The anchor and chain of the Merrimac have been taken from the water and placed on exhibition in the Jamestown exposition near by.

There are some who believe in the execution of criminals mainly for the physical and mental torment inflicted upon them. If there are any in Gila county who take that narrow and cruel view they must be gratified that Baldwin endured for five months, eleven days and a part of the twelfth, more of suffering than a mob with stake, torch, rope or bullet could have inflicted upon him in the short time he would have been in its power.

EDUCATED INDIAN GIRL CREMATED

Following Ancient Custom of Aborigines, Girl Who Was Educated in School Is Cremated After Death on the Reservation at Maricopa.

Educated in the Phoenix Indian school, surrounded by all the influences of civilization, and burned on a funeral pyre by her parents on the Maricopa reservation, are the two strange contradictions in the life of the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mosock, one of the tribal water captains on the reservation, says the Democrat.

J. J. Elwell, one of the farmers near the reservation, who is in Phoenix today, states that the young girl was cremated Tuesday in the early morning in less than two hours after she had died. The funeral, for such it is to the older Indians who hold to the belief of their fathers, was attended by all the members of the tribe.

Consumption, which followed an attack of measles, caused the young woman's death. She was well known among the Indians and well liked by them, members of the tribe, as far as their dispassionate nature will let them, telling Elwell of her good qualities.

While the body was being burned to ashes that would mingle with those of the mesquite wood on which she was laid, members of the tribe marched first in solemn procession and then with their wild religious ceremony around the burning body.

Hats, coats, shirt waists and other articles of wearing apparel, both male and female, were thrown into the fire to be destroyed with the body of the girl. Everything that was her's in life was piled on the burning mesquite.

Elwell states that but few of the older Indians, who still hold to cremation as the tribal form of burial, remain. The younger members who have been sent to school or have had a chance to adopt the ways of the whites, do not approve of their fathers' customs, and prefer to be buried in a coffin.

Each cremation marks the passing of another Indian who desires that form of burial, except when some child, the offspring of parents who still believe in the old ways, is burned. In a few years none of the Indians who believe in cremation will be left.

SEMPLE IS ACQUITTED

Editor Charged with Federal Law Violation Discharged at Tombstone

The case of the United States vs. D. W. Semple, charged with sending obscene literature through the mails, went to the jury at 5:30 p. m. in the United States district court, says a dispatch from Tombstone. After being out about an hour a verdict of acquittal was rendered.

The case has attracted considerable attention throughout the country, having grown out of a case in the justice court of Bisbee in which the Evening Miner, at that time owned or controlled by Semple, printed some evidence which in the judgment of the United States officials was beyond the pale of allowable matter.

Semple sold out his newspaper later and went to the Nevada goldfields. At the following term of the United States district court he was indicted, as indicated above, arrested at Manhattan, Nev., and brought back to Tombstone, where he remained in jail for some time before giving bond. He was tried at the spring term of court, a mistrial resulting.

Today's proceedings end this case, which has attracted more than passing interest.

FREIGHT RATE IS ALMOST THE LIMIT

Saddle Mountain Mining Company Up Against It Because of Raise Made by Phoenix & Eastern Since Randolph Lines Acquired Road.

The following is from the Florence Blade:

A raise on freight rates has become a serious problem at Christmas. It is said that the freight rates on coal, coke and lumber have been nearly doubled since the change in ownership of the P. & E. railroad. As the Christmas company are large consumers of these three commodities the increased freight rates add very largely to the operating expenses of both the mines and smelting plant at Christmas. These large low-grade mines are good profit yielders under favorable freight conditions, but not so under adverse freight conditions.

We understand that the rate now in force on the three commodities above named is about the same as was the wagon freight rate prior to the advent of the railroad, and if so, it is practically prohibitive in a low-grade camp. While we are not familiar with the ins and outs and whys and wherefores of railroad business, it looks to us as if a prohibitive raise on freight rates is equivalent to "killing the goose that lays the golden egg." At any rate, such a policy will discourage investments in low-grade mines here and that is bad for the country and bad for the railroad as well. It is the big low-grade mines that make business for both the country and the railroads, and the latter can increase their traffic here only by the encouragement and development of such properties.

COWBOY RELAY RACE

Tuck Potter and Jim Kinney Will Race at Bisbee for $500 Each

As a demonstration of his sincerity and absolute confidence in the process of himself and his ponies, Tuck Potter has put up a bet of $500 in the hands of Boston and Brown at Bisbee, which boldly says that Tuck can beat James Kinney in a four-change relay race at Don Luis park near Bisbee about three weeks from date.

Although Potter is anything but a hard loser, the circumstances which seemingly caused his defeat at the park on the afternoon of the Fourth of July, he believes warrants another trial.

Jim was the victor in this contest and it may have been that he would have won the race under any other circumstances but Tuck don't believe that he would have carried off the honors if the latter had not slipped and fell while dismounting after the third lap. It is true that Jim was running him a close second and would probably have made Tuck's last pony "hump" in order to cover the final lap in the lead, the accident shattering what was probably destined to be a neck and neck finish.

The First National bank is now located in its new home and cordially invites all to come in and look through.

Everybody invited to see the Scribner art works. Gibson complete and others at Barrett's Drug Store.

Crowds at the Iris

Last night was change night at the Iris and the house was crowded at both performances.

This week's program is a very interesting one. The picture of a caribou hunt in Newfoundland is one of the best hunting pictures yet shown here. This is a wonderful picture, showing a herd of caribou on the open prairie. Then the chase to the water's edge, where a large buck is killed directly in front of the camera.

"The Oyster Industry" is instructive as well as entertaining, showing the oyster beds under the water. Then the process of canning and shipping and finally in the last scene of the picture is seen a man enjoying the oyster on the half shell.

"Disturbing His Rest" and "Who's Hat" are two very funny pictures which kept the house in a roar of laughter.

Mr. Smith sings two new songs which make good with the audience. The same bill continues tonight and Wednesday night.
